Update on BHS Fall Sports:

Today, Governor Andrew Cuomo announced a start date for high school fall sports. According to the Governor, lower-risk sports (tennis, soccer, golf, cross country, field hockey and swimming) can begin practicing and then playing in all regions of the state, beginning on Sept. 21. The governor stated that because football and volleyball are considered higher-risk sports, these teams will be allowed to practice starting Sept. 21, but cannot currently compete.

Teams are prohibited from practicing or playing outside their school's region until at least Oct. 19. Travel is limited to remain within a region, and this will dictate which school will be played within a division.

The New York State Public High School Athletic Association will formulate specific plans for a fall schedule based on this guidance. We will continue to keep you informed as we learn more. Thank you for your support and understanding.
